A weary traveler cannot find a more perfect perch than atop the Hotel U Prince in Old Town Square in Prague.

The building procures a spectacular bird's-eye view of the gorgeous "City of a Hundred Spires". What could be even better than a breathtaking view? The answer is simple. Add a delectable restaurant with a varied and delicious menu, complete with friendly servers (friendliness can be a rarity in Prague, I fear).

On our trip to Prague last December 2010, we encountered a meteorological phenomenon: a blustery snowstorm. Strange as it may seem, Prague is not accustomed to such bountiful snowfalls and rarely tolerates a mediocre dusting. Consequently, this quaint town struggled to clean its streets and accommodate its guests in such conditions. As our European tour so far had been one giant snow day, the powdery conditions were no stranger to us. We relished viewing the Christmas decorations in their blanket of fluff.
